NOTICE IN TERMS OF SECTION 11A OF THE RESTITUTION OF LAND RIGHTS ACT, 1994 (ACT 22 OF 1994), AS AMENDED.

Notice is hereby given in terms of the above-mentioned section for the withdrawal of Government Gazette No. 28122 dated 31 October 2005 and Government Gazette No. 28413 Notice No. 64 dated 27 January 2006 in terms of which the under-mentioned properties were published.

This notice is made in light of the fact that the Mawela family who lodged a land claim on the farm Modderpoort 454 KR of which some of its portions have been consolidated to form farms Protea 711 KR, Uitvlugt 439 KR, Uitspan 716 KR and Sussensvale 708 KR, opted in terms of a resolution dated 9th July 2006 for alternative land. The alternative land identified is farm Gruispan 16 JR.

The Office of the Regional Land Claims Commissioner: Limpopo concluded negotiations with the owner of the farm Gruispan 16 JR to finalise the claim by the Mawela family. Both parties reached an agreement and the property will be purchased and transferred to the Mawela Communal Property Association in lieu of farm Modderpoort 454 KR.

It is therefore important to note that the below-mentioned properties are no longer subject to a land claim by the Mawela family.

- to invite research proposals in response to these defined priority areas of research; and
- to invite applications for postgraduate funding^R for research which will promote health and safety within the South African mining industry.

A consultative process has resulted in the Council formulating a co-ordinated, long-term health and safety research programme and identifying priority areas for research to commence in the 2008/2009 cycle. The objectives of the Council in commissioning health and safety research, for both general and commodity-based projects, are to:

- Obtain and evaluate information to establish evidence-based risk assessment, standard setting and health and safety performance measurement;
- Develop techniques or guidelines to prevent, reduce, control or eliminate risks;

- Develop and pilot innovative ideas and procedures, where appropriate, to eliminate, reduce or control risk;
- Obtain information on the extent of work-related ill health;
- Identify, develop and improve sampling and measurement techniques to detect environmental hazards and assess personal exposure;
- Understand the aetiology and identify and evaluate best-practice screening, diagnostic and treatment interventions to reduce the impact of occupational disease;
- Evaluate the effectiveness of control interventions;
- Understand risk perception, attitudes and behaviour related to health and safety and promote best practices in hazard recognition and procedural conformance;
- Empower its statutory committees to formulate policy, expedite research aimed at improving the health and safety in the South African mining industry; and
- Collaborate with national and international initiatives and research to promote health and safety in the mining industry.

The criteria by which proposals will be evaluated include:

- Added value and impact – the Council supports research which can contribute significantly to the improvement in the health and safety of South African miners;
- Value for money – the Council supports cost-effective research;
- Innovation – the Council welcomes new approaches or new areas of focus for research leading to technologies or best practices to improve health and safety;
- Excellence – the Council demands excellence, particularly in the methods employed to conduct research, be it quantitative or qualitative, and hence will consider the track record of the proposer/s for expertise and delivery (quality, time and to budget);
- Use and development of research skills – the Council requires research teams to possess the skills relevant to the success of the project and also favours projects which assist in developing research capacity, particularly in previously disadvantaged groups;
- Collaboration - the Council places a high priority on collaboration between researchers and the “teams of excellence” approach. Thus, the means of soliciting research proposals is intended to stimulate collaboration between centres of excellence and individual experts in order to optimise the use of the Council funding and the research outcomes.
- Development of key indicators – the Council recognises the challenge in assessing performance and improvement in health, as opposed to safety, in the mining industry. There is a lack of suitable occupational health (OH) indicators and baseline data. Thus innovative and robust research to develop relevant OH indicators and baseline values will be favourably considered.

The Council's research and implementation programme consists of occupational health and safety, addresses occupational medicine and hygiene, rock engineering, engineering and machinery, behavioural issues and technology transfer processes.

Each proposal must:

- Address only the research topic advertised and this must be specified;
- Be in the format indicated and the template specified using Word format; and
- Be phased as indicated in the project scope.

Thrust 1Title

SIM xxxxx An Investigation on elements of occupational health and safety behavioural and cultural issues in the South African mining industry (gold, coal, platinum and quarries)

Phase 1:

- document on key safety and cultural issues and analysis of the root causes
- development of the BS program for each sector

Motivation

At the MHSC mini-indaba and the 5th MHSC biennial summit in 2007 a need with regards to human factors through a research programme under thrust 1 was emphasised. The South African mining industry is unique in its operations and the diversity of culture of employees and employers. Evaluative research on of BBS and the majority of previous research done on BBS research concentrated on work environments that are conducive to work colleagues systematically monitoring one another's safety related actions (peer review). In the South African mining culture environment as in many other occupational settings, this may not be conducive safe, efficient and effective work practices. One of the reasons may be suspicion of providing information on fellow workers' bad habits which may be perceived as 'spying' on colleagues. It is also recognised that most of the published BBS research done has been in Europe and very little if any in the South African mining industry. SIMRAC 030101 was able to pave some direction and should be included as part of the literature review.

Statement:

In a myth of the careless worker Walker^A asserts that worker behaviour is about management control, the reasons behaviour safety systems are increasingly popular today is that is because some governments are getting tough on health and safety enforcement and different understanding of due diligence. Anam et al^A states that whilst BBS has been identified as a possible tool to break through accident plateau of the minerals industry, there is a lack of research into effectiveness within industry and moreover he argues, such initiative appear incompatible with the industry's organisational characteristics and culture. At an organisational level, that have been brave and honest enough to conduct genuine assessments of the continuing safety performance are recognising that the early gains made through BBS are slowing and in many cases, reached plateau due to amongst others limitations of the theoretical foundations of BBS, namely behaviourism^A

Primary OutputsPhase 1:

- Document on key safety and cultural issues and analysis of the root causes
- Development of the BS program for each sector

Scope

The survey a statically representative sample of mining industry employees to highlight behavioural and cultural issues common to these sectors in order to identify the root causes of such behaviours and to develop BBS processes applicable to these sectors. This must cover representative sample of gold, coal, diamond and quarry mining industries. Some of the data collection tools to be used should include but not limited to identification of key safety behaviour and key cultural issues. The survey design, target population and details of the data collection tools are to be ratified by HTAC prior to implementation

Thrust Area 6Project Title

SIM xxxxx Determination of a possible correlation between direct-on-filter X-ray Diffraction (XRD), direct-on-filter Infrared (IR) and re-deposition IR reported silica content results

Motivation

SIM 03 06 03 (B) conducted a parallel study, during Year 2 of the project, between independent laboratories for gravimetric-dust sampling results and silica analysis for quality assurance purposes for current Mine Health and Safety Council (MHSC) research (projects SIM 03 06 03 and SIM 06 06 01).

It was reported the parallel study that from the respirable-silica analysis results for X-ray Diffraction (XRD) and Infrared (IR) that the IR results in both instances were lower than the XRD analysis results. The percentage differences between the XRD and IR analysis results varied from 11.9 per cent to 22 per cent. However, the findings of this research are limited as only ten gravimetric dust-sampling filters were utilised to conduct the study.

The findings of the study results suggest that current respirable-silica-dust-exposure concentrations are being underestimated, as a result of utilising the IR analysis methodology to conduct silica analysis. It was therefore recommended that the study be expanded to determine the correlation (if any) between direct-on-filter XRD analysis, direct-on-filter IR analysis and re-deposition IR analysis reported silica content results.

Scope:

Determine the correlation (if any) between direct-on-filter XRD analysis, direct-on-filter IR analysis and re-deposition IR analysis reported silica content results. This must be done for different respirable dust loads, silica content and mineralogical compositions. The correlation (if obtainable) can then be utilised to repair historical exposure data, in an attempt to establish the correct respirable-silica personal-exposure concentrations. A literature search and compilation on the pros and cons analysis of the literature prior to embarking on this should be done to help target the specific unknown question that needs answered in the correlation study. The study should consider utilizing Gravimetric dust filters collected during the SIM 03 06 03 and SIM 06 06 01 projects where applicable and possible.

Primary outputs

A report on the correlation between direct-on-filter X-ray Diffraction (XRD), direct-on-filter IR and re-deposition IR reported silica content results, for different respirable dust loads, silica content and mineralogical compositions.

Estimated Duration

12 months

Required technology transfer

Thrust 8:

Title: SIM xxxxx: Development of the best practice document on management standards on whole body vibration in the South African mining industry.

Motivation

Mining involves usage of heavy machinery that can result to vibration and shocks, and the South African mining industry is not unique in having to manage these challenges. Health 703 provided guidelines for seat selection for whole body vibration control in industrial settings. Despite the complexity and ambiguity of standards, Whole-body vibration (WBV) can be managed.

Statement:

Whole-body vibration (WBV) is experienced through standing or sitting on a vibrating surface which causes the whole body to vibrate. The most common exposure is through driving or riding vehicles. Many vehicles and types of equipment such as trucks, loaders, dumpers, locomotives, shuttle cars and draglines are in use in the mining industry and operators of such equipment are exposed to whole-body vibration. An ISO-standard for the measurement and evaluation of WBV was published in 1993 as ISO 2631. The South African National Standards (SANS), previously known as the South African Bureau of Standards (SABS), has adopted ISO 2631 as SANS 2631-1 as the standard for measuring whole body vibration. There are currently no South African standards governing exposure limits to WBV and there is no defined limit for vibration for vehicle operators. WBV is not specifically mentioned in the COID Act (Act 130 of 1993). As a safety precaution, no instruments or equipment are allowed in a fiery mine that is not intrinsically safe (IS) and suitable to the South African mining industry, which would include instruments for measuring whole-body vibration levels.

Vibration levels for various vehicles from several studies, however, most values do not take into account the maintenance levels, age of the machinery/vehicle and other contributing factors, rendering standards development more complex.

Scope

Review available literature locally and internationally including relevant completed SIMRAC work on WBV and availability of intrinsically safe measuring instruments suitable for South African Mining. Review and critically analysed available standards on WBV both locally and internationally. Develop WBV standards to be used as best practice for the management of WBV in the SA mining industry.

Primary outputs

Best practice document on standards for managing WBV in the SA mining industry.

ESTIMATED PERIOD

12 MONTHS

Thrust 8

Title : SIM xxxxxx Exploratory survey of women in mining in the South African mining industry with specific regards to but not limited to Occupational health and safety issues that will enable the MHSC to develop an industry agenda specific to women in mining.

Motivation

The concept of women working in the mining industry is relatively new in South Africa and is supported by the mining charter of 2004 which requires that 10% of the workforce in the mining industry will be woman by the year 2009. The expected target has been set, yet the challenges with regards to the work itself and the occupational health and safety issues have not been well researched by the MHSC.

Statement:

The numbers of woman joining the mining industry is increasing drastically in all job categories such as Onsetters, Hoist drivers, Loco drivers, Stopping and Development crew members only to mention a few. Not much research had been done in terms of women in the mining industry and the impact on occupational health and safety is not known. The MHSA is meant to protect all employees including women, however, the biological and cultural issues specific to women that may impact on an occupational environment e.g. balance between work and family commitments had not fully researched in this sector. Anecdotal information indicate that the industry target is difficult to achieve, especially in lower categories of mining occupations.

Primary outputs

A document with hyperlinks detailing indicators for women on environmental and occupational factors that contributes to occupational health and safety.

SCOPE:

Review of literature locally and internationally with regards to women in mining highlighting amongst other the enablers and barriers to long term employment, occupational health and safety issues, organisational and cultural issues. A Survey of representative sample of women in mining of all categories is also required to identify risk factors in the mining operational environment that could adversely impact on the health and safety of woman in mining and the data collection tool should be ratified by OHTAC prior to implementation. The final document should contain amongst others recommendations on strategies to be addressed in the research agenda.

Typical recipients of the Report

- Mine Health and Safety Council, its committees and stakeholders

Requirements for technology transfer
